

Zayne Emory was born in McMinnville, Oregon in 1998. Born into an auto racing family, he spent most of his early childhood years at racetracks all across America. At age six, he began racing Quarter Midget Go-Karts and quickly found himself in the Winners Circle. After a couple years of racing, Zayne came to the realization that his true passion was performing and followed that path instead.

In 2007, Zayne booked the lead role as "Tiny Tim" in the musical "Scrooge," After twelve performances, he received an award for Best New Child Actor. That next spring, Zayne competed in the Oregon State Vocal Championship and became the Oregon State Double Grand Champion.

In 2010, with his passion growing to sing and act, Zayne and his mom moved to California to further pursue his dream. In just three months, he booked a national Audi car commercial and an ABC pilot "This Little Piggy." Later that year, he booked guest starring roles in "Criminal Minds," "I'm in The Band" (DISNEY XD), and "Desperate Housewives" where he played a kid with cerebral palsy.

In 2011, Zayne filled his resume with more guest roles in "The Closer", "Ghost Whisper", "Shake It Up", and "CSI: Miami." That fall, he filmed a 4-episode arc reprising his role on Disney XD's "I'm in The Band," for which he won two Young Artist Awards. In late 2011-2012, he recurred in two episodes of "Shameless" on Showtime.

During the next four years, while busy with school, Zayne filmed more guest stars on television: "A.N.T. Farm" & "Kickin' It," both for Disney, "Modern Family", "See Dad Run", and "Supergirl;" as well as two series regular roles in the pilots "Shmagreggie Saves the World" for Disney Channel (2012) and "An American Education" for ABC (2014).

More recently, he has filmed two movies. Maximum Ride based on a teen book series by James Patterson where he plays Iggy, a blind teenager, and Brimming with Love for PixL due out later this year!

Having graduated high school, this summer he'll continue to guest star on "The Goldbergs" and "Crazy-Ex Girlfriend" in recurring roles with six episodes already in filmed and more on his calendar

This Fall, Zayne leaves for Atlanta to film multiple episodes on the new show 24: Legacy on FOX. He has a strong reoccurring role, and the first episode airs Super-Bowl Sunday 2017.

Zayne is represented by Justice & Ponder, Inc and Abrams Artist Agency.
